

December 2011

Metal revs up luxury car maintenance facility

Located in Milford, N.J., Exoticars USA offers customers restoration and maintenance for luxury vehicles. Exoticars USA relocated and expanded to a 6,000-square-foot restored facility. Part of an old bank building that was abandoned in the 1990s, the facility was restored through the work of Flemington, N.J.-based architectural firm, Chambers Architecture Inc., and general contractor and installer, Washington, N.J.-based Hance Construction Inc.

"We had just outgrown our other shop so it was time to invest in our facilities," says Exoticars owner Wil de Groot. As a result, Hance Construction supplied a building from Kansas City, Mo.-based Butler Manufacturing's Liberty product line.

Art Hance, president of Hance Construction explains, "... [The] building from Butler's Liberty product category ... was ideal for Exoticars' needs and budget." As the fourth generation of his family to work in the automobile industry, de Groot now has a brand new facility in which to refurbish and restore some of the world's finest cars.

Butler Manufacturing,
www.butlermfg.com, Circle #36